order for the work and accounts of the order for the information of the British government and the London Times commission. It was shown that an exposure of the workings of the order, which would be necessary in order to refute Cronin's charges, would furnish to the London Times all the information which it had despaired of obtaining, by the appointment of a sub-commission in America. Cronin's maneuvres, it was also pointed out, whatever his motives, could hardly help but insure the extradition of every man who had gone across the water on "active service."

Chief Hubbard and States Attorney Longenecker neither explicitly affirm nor deny the reports. The story is that two trials of Cronin were held. The first was in January, but when it came to rendering a decision upon the evidence one man weakened. The trial committee was dissolved, but subsequently reorganized in secret. The place of the man who weakened was filled by another man. The man who retired from the first meeting became aware of the reorganization since Cronin's disappearance, so it is claimed, and has been the source from which the information has come to the authorities. The trial committee consisted of seven persons, each of whom, it is said, is now under surformation has come to the authorities. The trial committee consisted of seven persons, each of whom, it is said, is now under surveillance. They did not sentence any one to death or have any knowledge, much less have anything to do with the luring of Cronin from his office or the scenes in the Carlson cottage. All that, it is claimed, was the outgrowth of the verdict, which was simply that the proof showed Cronin to be a spy.

was simply that the proof showed Cronin to be a spy.

Coughlin, O'Sullivan and Woodruff, charged with complicity in the Cronin murder, were arraigned to-day. Coughlin asked a continuance, but the others said they were willing to be tried at once. At the request of the state's attorney the trial was put over till next term. The state's attorney says he has enough evidence to hang them.

Considerable wreckage painted green and slate color is coming ashore on the island. Among that found at Smithpoint to-day were gilt mouldings in considerable quantities, one large door in considerable quantities, one large door with three ground glass circular top lights, one window sash, evidently belonging to the same steamer, and also the steamer Victoria bills of lading. The wine cards of the steamship Haytier, Republic were washed ashore at Nantucket to-day. After securing the bank funds they joined a fourth robber who was holding their horses just outside the bank. They left town on the run, firing shots in the air to frighten the citizens. PINE RIDGE AGENCY, Dak., July 24 .-It is now definitely known that prior to the arrival of the commissioners a combination was formed at this agency, with Red Cloud at the head, pledged to oppose the bill and not even consider it. This explains the reluctance on the part of many of the Indians to talk about the bill. The disintegration of this combination has been quietly cyrried on by the commissioners for several days, and it now seems as if some progress was being made. The Indians are signing slowly and the prospects are more favorable.

There was a conference this afternoon at which few Indians, except those who favor the bill, were present. All efforts to secure the support of Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horses have thus far failed. Little Wound also remains obstinate. To-night there is little in the situation encouraging to the friends of the bill. Gen. Crook acknowledges that he is unable to account for the change in Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horses. This disposition toward it, however, occurred the same day that the letter of Godrey, who is said to be secretary of the Indian defense association, was received by the commissioners, asking a post-ponement of negotiations here until the arrival of Indian Inspector Pollock. The work of the commissioners goes on and there is no evidence of any weakening of effort on their part. At 7 o'clock to-night 500 had signed. the bill and not even consider it. This ex-

Probate Judge Clifford issued warrants for the arrest of forty Italian laborers now at work on the Cokedale branch for refusing to pay road tax. Sheriff Templeton, with the warrants, left here to make the arrests about 5 o'clock this evening, but has not yet returned. It is learned, however, that he has the gang corralled and will bring them to Livingston to-morrow for trial. Road Supervisor Vater gave these men the usual three days' notice, and they refused either to work the day required for road purposes or pay and the arrests were made in consequence. The lowest penalty, $5, will probably be given these men, and that with the costs will probably make their road tax cost them this year in the neighborhood of $20.

Mrs. Hershfield thought that Ezra had been kidnaped and still thinks that he was kept away from her against his will. But the police have a theory that the boy stayed away longer than he intended to and was afraid to go home for fear of being punished. On the very day that he went away Mrs. Hershfield intended to take Ezra and the rest of her family to Montana They intended to leave on the 6 o'clock train that night, and it is supposed the boy went over on the North river shore for a last visit to his favorite play ground. Last Thursday some boys came into the Sixty-seventh street station and told the sergeant that they had seen Ezra down by the river at Eighty-third street. There is a steep bank there and they had to go around to reach the place where he was. By the
